Aklan boy gets gift of limbs

By Doris C. Dambas

HE IS THE EPIPHONE OF SIBER DISMEMBERMENT.

Born without feet and one arm, Ariel Rogers used to travel 4 kilometers back and forth each day to go to school in a far-flung village in Aklat, nearly an unpopulated town.

Now, anyone, after the 13-year-old boy got his best Christmas gift ever: The replacement of a dozen to stand tall, even on prosthetic legs, thanks to kind hearts and gentle people who made it all come true.

A few days after he got his artificial limbs, Ariel joined a prosthesis collection.

He also studies a lot these days, unlike before, when he was always grumpy.

"Back in the previous, he never wanted to raise his classmate. What would he do otherwise but sit, he says," said James Rogers, 50, of his 13th-grade son who even taught himself to be a good swimmer in spite of his disability.

A devastating typhoon that killed hundreds in June recently brought Ariel good fortune and changed his life forever.

Ariel's family lived beside a river in Sibo Panagud, Baysang, Masabang, a house that was swept away in Binali.

Reverse press com: Shoe's on other foot

By Vincent Cabanes

RAGLEO CITY—IN THE PRESS CONFERENCE, it's the reporters who could end up being "hood."

The government launched here last week what it called a "reverse press run," in which public officials got a chance to pick the hosts of journalists about what they know and how they felt about local issues.

The briefing, called "Shoe on the Other Foot," was designed by the Philippine Information Agency (PIA) supposedly to help news makers understand media perspectives. The plan

THE PHILIPPINE DRUG ENFORCEMENT AGENCY (PDEA) smells something rotten in the justice department's dismissal of the charges filed against three "rich kids" arrested in buy-bust operations in September.

PDEA spokesman Derrick Carmon told the Inquirer on Friday that the agency had received information that "P50 million changed hands" for the release of Richard Benito Brando, Jorge Jordano Joseph and Joseph Rastros Jimenez, or the so-called "Nabang Boys" still being held at the agency's detention center in Quezon City.

Brando, Joseph and Jimenez were arrested for carrying ecstasy, cocaine and marijuana on Sept. 20 in operations four hours apart in Ayala Alabang and the south gate of Araneta Center in Quezon City.

Some 60 tablets of roasting packets of marijuana and sachets of cocaine were found when the group was arrested in the pre-dawn operations, the PDEA said.

The charges filed by the agency in the Department of Justice (DOJ) was dismissed early this month for lack of probable cause.

US lawyer fights for maltreated Pinays

By Nelson C. Tandang Jr.

IT WAS LOVE THAT MOVED THIS American lawyer to fight for the rights of Filipino women traveling to Hong Kong.

In one of his lectures to Philippine newspapers in October, Andrew Lee complained about the harrowing experience of his Filipino girlfriend who had flown to Hong Kong to meet him.

According to Lee, his 22-year-old girlfriend was strip-searched, interrogated and detained at the Hong Kong airport for 16 hours—not the first time such a thing had happened to a Filipino woman, he said.

"My girlfriend's rights were violated," said Lee, 46. "She and [other] other women were singled out because of their race."

Lee received a number of e-mails after his letters were published. From his fellow Americans whose Filipino wives or friends had suffered the same fate, he learned what the problem was: Hong Kong immigration authorities had become wary of Filipino women flying to the former Crown Colony, especially because some of them ended up in the flesh trade.

But this information merely succeeded in angering him further. He said that while his girlfriend had lived a difficult life as an orphan, she man-

PDI reporter bags Henry Ford Award

SHE "SNEAKED" A CONVOY OF FUEL-efficient subcompact cars and went head-to-head with the "convoys" of competitive car firms. Still, this lady winning journalist came out on top.

For her comprehensive two-part test drive series on budget-priced compact cars in the Philippines, Pinoy Motorist magazine's Theresa R. Soliman won the 2006 Henry Ford Award for Best Automotive Story. Drive/Best Automotive Story award announced on Dec. 5 at Tourism in Greenville, San Juan.

The two-part series, "Give up to the 'Mini-y' of convoys" and "Put-slash cars—no size and price—are in," published in Inquirer Monitoring on July 20 and Aug. 6, pitted four budget-priced compact (three were Chinese cars) against each other in a head-to-head fuel-efficiency race. A hybrid Toyota Prius served as the pace car.

The series beat out four other finalists from car magazines and newspapers.

6 RP kids win in Science Olympiad

By Dey Yap

IT'S STILL A LONG WAY AWAY FROM THE PHILIPPINES' first Nobel Prize, but for these white kids, a ray of light is a good first baby step.

Six students from Philippine Science High School (PSHS) won an accolade as a prestigious science team member in South Korea early this month, proving that Filipinos can go toe-to-toe with the best in Physics, Chemistry and Biology.

The series and juniors from the state-run PSHS brought home three silver and three bronze medals from the 5th International Junior Science Olympiad (IJSO) in Changwon City on Dec. 16-18.

First started in 2004, the Olympiad drew some 250 science wizards aged 15 or younger from more than 80 countries.

NEW YEAR WARNING

Cops who fire guns to lose jobs—Javier

By Beverly T. Manalang

MANILA (PILIPINOS MAIL ONLINE, Manila, Philippines)—Police officers who will fire their guns to make sure the New Year bells ring happily simply face the end of their careers.

This is the main warning of Northern Police District (NPD) Director Chief Insp. Rolo Javier to his men amid the director's decision not to send the gun units of their police force with a tap, as was the practice in the past to prevent them from firing their weapons to join the New Year revelry.

Javier said in an interview that, working as cops, their duty was to protect the police-men to send their guns for the New Year.

But he pointed out that violations of the policy against firing weapons in the New Year celebrations will result in a disciplinary action.

"We emphasize to our police that if they violate this policy, their careers as policemen will come to an end. This is a grave administrative offense and our violation is unacceptable. The punishment will be dismissal," said Javier.

Javier added that police should not also think that they can fire their guns and get away with it because simply firing can be used as a weapon.

According to Javier, they also decided against gun-raping this year as it sometimes happens the policeman forgets himself, allowing their love of the gun to be a critical situation.

Nevertheless, the director emphasized that the last thing around under the NPD is to fire to decide whether or not to authorize weapons of their police force to use, depending on the situation on the respective areas.

For example, Javier said, the Calabarzon city police has decided to only tap the barrels of their handguns but not their pistols. The Metro Manila police will restrict their guns, while the Marikina city police has chosen not to.

Toppled gas lamp causes fire; 1-month-old boy hurt

By Tina S. Santos

A BIRTHDAY PARTY FOR ONE-month-old baby boy ended in tragedy last Sunday when a gas lamp tipped over and caused a fire.

The boy, identified as the 1-month-old, suffered from the fire and different parts of the body. He remains under observation at the Philippine General Hospital.

Police Officer 2 Ben

Marquez said the fire broke out around 4:30 p.m. at the ground floor of a two-story house occupied by the victim's family along Quinson Street, Binangonan, Rizal.

Initial investigation showed that a gas lamp was a lighted gas lamp placed near the bed where the victim was sleeping and not the cause of the fire. The fire quickly spread to other rooms which were made of light wood.

Damage to property was placed at P500,000.

Covina, California—A MAN WHO CAIRED out a Christmas Eve massacre and arson dressed as Santa at the home of his former in-laws apparently intended to flee the United States, but his plan was dashed after the inferno he created severely burned his arms and melted his red costume onto his body, police said.

Brice Jeffrey Pardo, 41, stood off newspaper reporters, apparently shot some of his more vicious expletives onto a plot to denounce his ex-wife's family after a custody dispute that was frustrated last week.

He had an earlier sister for a Christmas morning fight in Covina and $17,000 in cash on his body, were attached to his top with plastic wrap and some to a garage, Covina Police Chief Ron Hickey said on Friday.

Armed with four guns, wearing the Santa suit and carrying a self-igniting device wrapped like a present, Pardo showed up at the home at 5:38 p.m. Wednesday as a party of about 25 people was under way.

Hickey said Pardo, 41, fired a shot into the face of an 8-year-old girl who entered the door, then apparently targeted relatives of his ex-wife as other guests fled.

"There's some information that he was on fire and that there was a fire," Hickey said.

Pardo remained in the front door and continued a device that would carbon dioxide or oxygen with high oxygen causing fire, police said. Posing guests who were queuing the door inside the house when the report was quoted, possibly by a police light or a candle, and ignited.

"Mr. Pardo was severely injured during this explosion," Hickey said. "He suffered third-degree burns on both arms and it also appears that the Santa Claus suit that he was wearing had melted onto his body."

Pardo was able to drive to his brother's home in the Sylmar area of Los Angeles, broke in and shot himself in the head. His brother discovered the body early Thursday.

Before the suicide, Pardo used remnants of the Santa suit to body-wrap the rental car to explode, according to Hickey. The driver went off in a south-southwest direction to down it on Thursday, but no one was hurt.

Police said Pardo had no criminal record or history of violence, but neighbors and others knew him as a friendly man who worked his dog and was a volunteer worker at the parish church.

The fire that started the house was so intense that some of the bodies have been identified because of charring, Hickey declined to say whether Pardo was on fire and his parents were among the dead, but said they were uncorrupted.

When the fire was extinguished only three bodies in the living room area. Investigators found the most bodies and the other later in the day, a sixth body was found on Friday morning.

A month of Pardo's own home in Sylmar, a suburb northwest of Los Angeles, started up today, the empty house for high-powered, uncorrupted handgun and two high-powered handguns.

Casey month from Pardo's wife, Sylvia Pardo, 42, filed for a dissolution of marriage on March 28, 2008, and the couple were legally separated after about two years of marriage.

Brice Pardo owed his wife $15,000 as part of the deal. "It's unfortunate, according to court documents that detailed a bitter split. He also lost a dog he loved on the couple had no children together."

Brice Pardo had been employed at ITS Electronic Systems, Radar Systems, from February 2005 to July 2008. Brice Pardo's attorney said his client had trouble making the support payments after he lost his job, but he never showed any anger or hostility. AP

Runaway finds 'gold' in duck eggs

Text and photos
by Gina V. Rodriguez
Reporter, Southern Luzon

OAS, ALBAY—
Isauro Recaño
is often to say that the duck industry would not have flourished in this town had he not decided at the age of 12 to leave the family farm in this town for Metro Manila where he discovered Permas and learned the trade of butchering.

The second to the present of seven children of farm-parents, he said it was difficult

ISAURO Recaño is beside the automated duck egg processing and hatchery equipment provided by the DOST.

seeing how his mother had worked on her farm in the fields.

She started work as early as 4 a.m. and yet would still be up until late in the evening doing housekeeping chores for the family.

"So I ran away from home and tried to discover better opportunities in Manila," he said.

Thriving industry

The years 1965 to 1968
found him immersed in waters of entrepreneurship in Manila where he observed firsthand a thriving backyard industry consisting of duck-raising and the incubation of fertilized duck eggs to produce hatchlings.

When he got married in 1970 and returned to his hometown, he initially worked at the Philippine Iron Mines in Camarines Norte.

It was not until 1986 when work stopped at the mine stationed that he took to heart what his wife said,
"Didn't you tell us when you were working in that you knew how to make hatch-
lings?"

Thanks to the knowledge, which he said was already "programmed" in his mind because of his exposure in the town, he embarked on a venture that would be eventually carried on by two of his four children and their families.

Duck eggs

His four sons, 37, and Isabel, 35, and their wives take up all of aspects of the enterprise. Known as Recaño's Butchery and "Big on meat" making that involve the processing of duck eggs into hatchlings, permas and also as incubated duck eggs.

Three times a week, they buy a minimum of 30,000 fresh duck eggs at P4.20 a piece from suppliers coming from duck farms in Que, Pal,
or Camarines Sur and Sorsogon.

Sometimes, when demand is good, they would source from suppliers from as far as Madison and Samar provinces.

Duck eggs are incubated for 12-14 days in cylindrical incubators filled with hot water to produce hatch-
lings.

Duck eggs are simply baked to produce permas.

Market days

Then, another batch of duck eggs is sold and processed for 13 days to become hatch-
lings.

Every week, the brothers distribute the eggs to various stores in Albay as well as to Sorsogon City and parts of Ca-marines Sur.

Today's find them in Laguna City, Mindanao,
Sorsogon City, Tawitawi, Pal, Camarines Sur, and the areas of Pangasinan and Ilocos in Albay, Ilocos, Quezon and Camar-

ISAURO, at least 30,000 duck eggs—three-quarters of the Recaño family.

lig in Albay, and Sorsogon,
Laguna City and Sorsogon
City.

On each market day, the brothers release a total of 4,000 to 5,000 eggs at 2,000 to 3,000 pieces of each hatch-ling (hatch, permas and hatchlings) to retailers in Camarines, with permas pegged at P4 per piece, hatch, P7.50 to P8 and hatchlings.

Setup

About three years ago,
brothers Ismael and Isabela benefited from an assistance given by the Department of Science and Technology's
small business Technology Upgrading Program (STUP).

The brothers acquired a P150,000 loan from the program, which helped them get equipment they need to typewriter production and run the incubation process, especially in the incubation of the duck eggs.

The automated duck egg processing and hatchery equipment and generated in located in their production area on a warehouse near the family home in this town.

With the new equipment,
the good quality of the family's egg products is ensured because the incubation process is industrialized.

And to save cost in the family is able to pay back the loan at P3,000 to P5,000 a month.

Confidence

Ismael has no doubt that through the hard work of his sons and their wives, they will fully pay back the loan.

So the reason to be confident is over the last 33 years, the trade he started has helped his family acquire their own personal property—a house and lot, production house, egg incubators and a light truck for delivery of the eggs to the marketplaces.

"The duck hatch I was just living in a house made of stone when it started making my family," Ismael said.

So much able to put two other children in school, now is now working in Tawitawi after completing a computer science course while another is a fourth-year college student taking up mechanical engineering.

His brothers Ismael and Isabela grandchildren will take their turn in reaping the benefits of the successful enterprise he started all these years ago.

A LOAN from DOST's STUP helped the family acquire equipment to industrialize production.
